Odds and Ends

Sunday the 13th was a lucky day as the weather was just about perfect for a quick ride to get out to the V-Day festivities. Cool, but very manageable. Had 30 or so show up but since they didn't know the "secret password", we proceeded at KSU with only 4 of us braving the highways. Ok, perhaps there weren't 30 and of course there wasn't any "secret password" but the 4 of us quickly made out to the restaurant Abby chose. It was here where we met up with a number of Chapter members who decided to "cage" it. Abby (and her hubby) decorated the place and we did several games prior to "breaking bread" sharing a meal and the camaraderie that we all in H.O.G. look forward to. The Safari theme was pretty cool and despite fighting off lions, anacondas, stampeding elephants, and Zulu warriors, everyone made it out alive. This was a KSD event so at the end, we all went our separate ways as many of us had Super Bowl engagements a little later in the day. Kudo's to Tony for being our sweep and keeping us out of harm's way and to LOH for taking the lead on this event. For those who couldn't roll out of bed, you missed yet another outstanding event. Hope to see you out on the next ride. F2-
